

1. Admission Requirements

Admission to the DFFB solely depends on applicants passing the entrance exam. The focus of this exam is on the artistic (not the technical) aptitudes of the applicants. Applicants to the DFFB must be at least 21 years old when they begin their studies. Applicants can apply a maximum of twice to the DFFB, regardless of the specialisation to which they apply.

The DFFB curriculum focuses on both the practical and theoretical elements of filmmaking.

2. Training and Specialisations

The curriculum during the first year of studies focuses on a general film education, based on the idea of the generalist filmmaker. In this first year, students do not yet specialise in their chosen stream, but learn the foundational skills in the most important aspects of filmmaking – screenwriting, cinematography, directing, producing, and editing & sound. Students end their first year by creating a film.

Throughout the course of studies, the boundaries between the specialisations remain open. Students become filmmakers in the best sense of the word: they learn about filmmaking from partaking in each of the key film crew positions. Students learn to think as filmmakers, understanding the filmmaking journey in its entirety and developing basic skills in each filmmaking area, while also gaining specialist knowledge and technical skills in their chosen stream. Understanding and applying filmmaking skills from pre- to post-production is an essential part of the curriculum, and students also apply the film theory that they learn during the entire filmmaking process.

3. Entrance Exam

The entrance exam consists of two parts: the pre-selection and the exam week. The application materials that must be submitted for pre-selection are listed below. After reviewing and discussing all the materials, the selection committee chooses a small number of candidates to take the entrance exam during the exam week at the DFFB in Berlin.

A maximum of ten students per specialisation are accepted at the DFFB.

The following materials must be submitted for the preselection process:

- I. Write a curriculum vitae (CV).
(CV must be in text form, no tabular format; max. 3000 characters without spaces)
- II. Briefly explain why you are applying to the producing specialisation and not for the directing, cinematography, editing, or screenwriting specialisations.
(max. 500 characters without spaces)
- III. Create a three-minute short film with titled "A Sunday on the Moon".

You can choose the film form, for example, fiction, non-fiction, essay, and experimental films are possibilities. In assessing your film, the decisive factor is not your involvement in the film's technical creation--whether you directed the film yourself, wrote the screenplay yourself, etc. What is important to the selection committee is that your idea and unique approach to the theme of "A Sunday on the Moon" is visible in the film, and that you found the right cinematic means and partners to create the film.

You can film on any format, but we only accept films with a maximum resolution of 1920 x 1080 and an aspect ratio of 16:9 or 4:3. Permitted file formats are Quicktime (mov), Mpeg2 and Mp4. We recommend Mp3/H.264 as audio/video codec. The file must not be larger than 150 MB.

- IV. Write a logline (maximum three sentences) as well as a synopsis (maximum 500 characters without spaces) for the film. Additionally, write what you, as a producer, found particularly interesting in working on this film (maximum 1500 characters without spaces).

Only submit your own work – no films, photos, or documents in which other people were significantly involved.
