

1. Admission Requirements

Admission to study at the DFFB relies solely on successfully passing the entrance exam. Admission is based on the applicant's artistic aptitudes, not their technical abilities. Applicants to the DFFB must be at least 21 years old at the beginning of their studies. An applicant can apply to the DFFB a maximum of twice, regardless of the specialisation (screenwriting, directing, producing, cinematography, or picture and sound editing).

DFFB studies are focused on film production, but students are also required to understand the theoretical aspects of filmmaking.

2. Training and Programs

The first year is a foundation year, and the curriculum based on the concept of the well-rounded filmmaker. This means that the curriculum is the same for all students; students are not yet streamlined into their chosen specialisations. All students familiarise themselves with the most important trades of film production—screenwriting, directing, producing, cinematography, and picture and sound editing. Students complete their first year with the making of a film.

At the DFFB, the boundaries between each specialisation are not rigid. This means that students become filmmakers in the best sense of the word; they study and understand film from as many angles as possible. The goal of the DFFB is for students to understand filmmaking as a whole, while also specialising. Students learn about filmmaking from development to distribution, while delving into theory and applying this theoretical knowledge to their films.

3. Entrance Exam

The entrance exam consists of two parts. First, there is a pre-selection process. Next, if the applicant is pre-selected, then they are invited to the DFFB in Berlin for a week of exams. Below is a list detailing what each applicant must submit for pre-selection. A jury reviews the application, then selects candidates who are invited to Berlin for the exam week.

A maximum of eight students per specialisation are admitted to study at the DFFB each academic year.

The following works and documents must be submitted for pre-selection:

I. A curriculum vitae (CV).

(tabular CV; max. 1500 characters without spaces)

Your tabular CV must allow the jury to see that you have been involved in filmmaking for some time. This involvement can include internships, your own film work, studies in related fields, etc.

II. Briefly explain why you are applying for directing and not for screenwriting, cinematography, producing, or picture and sound editing.

(maximum 750 characters without spaces)

III. Write a short story on the theme "ON THE EDGE".

(max. 1500 characters without spaces)

IV. Create a 3-minute short film with the title "THE NIGHT BEFORE".

You can work within any film genre to create your film. For example, you can work in fiction, non-fiction, essay, experimental, etc. The screenplay or the documentary screenplay or concept must be written by you. You must also direct the film. Another person can do the cinematography.

It is important that the film's length is a maximum of 3 minutes. Longer works will not be viewed by the jury.

We do not specify the production form, but we only accept films with a maximum resolution of 1920 x 1080 in an aspect ratio of 16:9 or 4:3. Permitted file formats are Quicktime (mov) and Mp4. We recommend Mp3/ Apple Lossless/H.264 as audio/video codec and a data rate of 10 Mbit/second. The file must not be larger than 150 MB.

V. Write a director's statement about the short film that you created for this application.

Please discuss the following questions:

(max. 1500 characters without spaces)

How did you work on the film? What were the challenges? Which shots were especially important for you? Is there a central image?

VI. Think of a location and write a scene for two characters. One of the characters is in a different emotional state at the beginning of the scene than at its end.

(max. 3000 characters without spaces)

Only submit your own work and not films, photos, or written work in which others have played a significant role.
